

Stress Free Moving with Storage Pods

Storage pods are a safe, secure, and convenient way to move your belongings without dealing with the pressure of a moving companys schedule. When the pods are dropped off at your home, you have full control over how long you take to pack them, when they are picked up, when the company brings them to your new home, and how long you take to unpack them. Pods significantly reduce the stress of moving house.

It is easy to use storage pods. You call the company and order the number of pods you will need, then specify the date you want them to arrive. A company truck leaves the pods outside your home. You pack them at your own pace and lock them, then call the company for pickup. They load them onto their truck and either take them directly to your new home, or hold them in their storage facility until you call for them. When you receive the pods at your new address, you unpack them as slowly or quickly as you like, then call the company to remove them. Thats all. You may not even need to be home when the company drops off and picks up the pods.

Pods are good for any kind of move, but they are ideal for moves in which there will be more than a few days lag between moving out of your old home and into your new home. For instance, if you sell your previous house before you close on a new house, you may need to stay in a hotel or a temporary rental for a month or two while you wait to be able to move into your new house. If you go through a regular moving company, you will have to have your belongings delivered to storage (with all the wear and tear of moving them off the truck and into the storage unit), then you will have to have them loaded onto a new truck to be brought to your new house. Basically, you run all the risks of moving twice, and you pay for the privilege twice. With storage pods, your possessions stay secure in the pod throughout the process, so they run far less risk of damage, and the price for storing the pods and reloading them when you are ready for them is factored into the fee. You move once and pay once. In addition, it is normal to store pods for a long time, so you do not have to deal with bewildered calls from the moving company asking you when you want your things.

Pods are easy to use, as you can see. The convenience of pods can ease the strain of even the most involved and overcomplicated move. Why not simplify your upcoming move and place an order for storage pods? Related content Self storage -- "title="Related to the topic of Self-service moving">Self-storage -- Storage -- Storage and moving --

About the Author

Learn more about moving, go to storage.blogmyz.com.

Source: <http://tacomagarage.com>