

The Commercial Real Estate

The Commercial Real Estate business has benefited greatly from the increasing popularity of shopping malls and the apartment style living. Though those two are far from being the only ones to represent the business. Commercial Real Estate encompasses four groups of real estate. They are Apartments, Offices, Retail and Industrial. The first two categories, Apartments and Offices, are very clear about their contents, Retail and Industrial, however, include more than one would think.

Retail division of Commercial Real Estate includes everything from medical centers to hotels, and retail stores. It is a different branch of the Real Estate business, and is one of the most often recognizable as Commercial. Shopping centers and malls fall into this category as well as small retail shops. Industrial Commercial Real Estate deals with farms, garages and warehouses. There may be a strong connection at times between the Retail and the Industrial Commercial Real Estate and that is because some retail stores, the larger ones, require a warehouse for its merchandise. Also some of the retail stores work very closely with farms and may even purchase certain farms themselves, or else work exclusively with them. All of those divisions are under the same umbrella of Real estate though they differ greatly from one another in almost every way. All of those divisions are also interconnected. The offices may and do work with the retail stores and some even exist for the purpose of running or helping run a retail store. Some offices also require the use of warehouses, or are made to run the warehouses. Also certain Apartments may be using warehouses for additional storage. They may also be using specific retail stores, or hotels, yet another part of the Retail division, to fulfill its needs. In all the Commercial Real Estate is a business that is greatly intertwined.
